MEATLESS MONDAY

RECIPE CARD IN-STORE

One day a week, cut out the meat. Why you ask? One day is about 15% of a week – the exact percentage of saturated fat (found in animal products) that should be lowered in our diet according to the Surgeon General.

Meatless Health Benefits

Going meatless is easy on your body. Nutrition experts have been encouraging us for years to cut down on how much saturated fat and cholesterol we eat and to increase our consumption of plant-based foods.

Meatless meals may lower your risk of some diseases. In 2012, British researchers reviewed evidence for vegetarian diets and reported both were linked with a lower risk of coronary heart disease and type 2 diabetes.

Quick Meatless Swaps

When going meatless it is important to seek out certain key nutrients in meatless alternatives to avoid any nutrient deficiencies.

Calcium: Swap dairy products for fortified dairy-free milks (soy, rice, almond), which contain about the same amount of calcium as dairy. Calcium is also found in beans, nuts, seeds and green leafy vegetables.

Protein: Swap your meat-based protein for these protein-rich plant-based foods: beans, whole grains, seeds and nuts.

Environmental Impact of a Meatless Day

According to experts, getting meat onto your plate takes a toll on the environment. The United Nation's Food and Agriculture Organization estimates that one-fifth of the man-made greenhouse gas emissions are generated by the meat industry.

Going meatless doesn't mean you have to be a vegetarian. Experts have shown that even just as little as adopting Meatless Monday's into your lifestyle has many healthy benefits to your body and the environment. Not sure where to start your meatless menu? Look for our Meatless Monday recipe card in-store.
